Brooklyn, N. Y., Jan. 12.—The Beecher-Tilton trial was resumed this morning. Both principals to the suit appeared. Shortly before 1 o'clock great commotion was caused by the entrance of Mrs. Tilton and her father, ex-Judge Morse. They took seats 'near Mrs. Beecher. Theodore smiled, but his countenance looked dumbfounded.

Mrs. Ovington was also present.

Judge Morris resumed his argument at 11 o'clock. He said he would speak chiefly in relation to Tilton's expulsion from Plymouth Church. Beecher's whole action of this matter showed he was trying to prevent the exposure of this crume when, Mrs. Woodhull having threatened to crush him, he asked the aid of Moulton.

The jury could judge whether the de-when, Mrs. Woodhull having threatened to crush him, he asked the aid of Moulton.

The jury could judge whether the defendant would leave his reputation and honor in the hands of another if there were not some terrible secret between them. The counsel read the second letter from Mrs. Woodhull to Beecher, which showed their friendship. He referred to the meeting of Tilton and Beecher in the cars at Boston in January, 1872, when the plaintiff said, "Go in again, man, I will not disturb you."

These were the words of an injured man who knew the crime committed against his home. The famous letter of Beecher wherein he offers to step down and cout was then read by Morris and commented on. He doubted that Beecher would be willing to give up the great Plymouth church unless guilty.

When he wrote that letter he feared the result of public opinion if all the facts of his crime became generally known. No man could write such letters without feeling his guilt. It was Beecher's duty to deny it fully, and his silence was proof of guilt, while he continued to preach Sunday after Sunday with this infamous charge against him.

Opinion of the Associated Press Agent.

Opinion of the Associated Press Agent. Washington, D. C., Jan. 12.—The National Republican this morning contains a lengthy editorial on the subject of the partisan course of the New York Associated Press in dealing with the Louisiana matter. The Republican says the agent of the Associated Press in New York appears to be rivaling his brethren in the South in his efforts to misrepresent Louisiana affairs.

CABINET MEETING, ETC.
